

MISSOURI

.....
Joplin, MO Tornado

NEW Situation Update (as of 5/23/2011)

On May 22, 2011 severe storms impacted Missouri with significant damage to the City of Joplin. The Joplin tornado was described as being about one-half mile wide when it touched down at about 5:41 p.m. Sunday. It reportedly grew to as much as three-quarters of a mile wide, before returning to about a half-mile in width. The track was about 4 miles long, heavily damaging residences, businesses, schools and apartment complexes. This is a densely populated section of the central city and estimates are that 10-30 percent of the city of Joplin had been damaged or destroyed, or approximately 2,000 structures.

NEW FEMA Mission Assignment-Missouri

Two FEMA Mission Assignments are pending for Missouri. More details will be forthcoming in our next brief.

For those working in flooded areas

MRSA (Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA), is a bacterial infection that is highly resistant to some antibiotics. The bacteria can cause infection when they enter the body through a cut, sore, catheter, or breathing tube. The infection can be minor and local (for example, a pimple), or more serious (involving the heart, lung, blood, or bone). So, if you are working with the flood waters, victims, or doing damage assessment, be very careful, wear gloves, wash your hands regularly, and try to NOT touch anything unless absolutely necessary.

Secretary of Homeland Security Janet Napolitano announced the release of FY 2011 grant guidance and application kits for 12 DHS grant programs totaling $2.1 billion to assist states, urban areas, tribal and territorial governments, non-profit agencies, and the private sector in strengthening our nation's ability to prevent, protect, respond to and recover from terrorist attacks, major disasters and other emergencies.

Further information on DHS's preparedness grant programs is available at www.dhs.gov and www.fema.gov/government/grant/nondisaster.shtm .
