

TRIBAL LEADER
Recognition Day
for National Service

COMMUNICATIONS TOOLKIT

April 5, 2016

Dear Tribal Leaders,

Thank you for participating in the 2016 Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service!

On April 5, 2016, tribal leaders across the country will highlight the impact of AmeriCorps and Senior Corps and thank those who serve.

Your participation will spotlight the importance of citizen engagement, recognize the dedication of national service members, and inspire more residents to get involved in their communities.

Communication and media outreach are key to the success of this effort. We have put together this Communications Toolkit to make it easy to plan an event and reach out to the media. In this toolkit, you will find:

- Event and Media Suggestions
- Planning a Great Event
- Key Messages and Talking Points
- Frequently Asked Questions
- Social Media Guide
- Photo Guidance
- Sample Media Advisory
- Sample Press Release
- Sample Proclamation
- Sample Op-Ed
- Sample Thank You Letter

Additional resources including logos, web banners, and customizable event materials are available on our Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service resources webpage, located here.

We hope these materials are helpful. If you have questions or would like help with communications, please email pressoffice@cns.gov.

Thank you for joining with us. We look forward to working with you to make this day a big success!

EVENT AND MEDIA SUGGESTIONS

The Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service is a nationwide bipartisan effort to recognize the positive impact of national service in Indian Country, to thank those who serve, and to encourage citizens to give back to their communities.

There are many ways you can participate. Below are suggested activities in three categories: Public Events, Recognition, and Media. After you have figured out your plans, please feel free to tell us about them by email TribesForService@cns.gov.

Public Events

- Become an Employer of National Service: AmeriCorps and Peace Corps alumni are strong leaders who are motivated, flexible, innovative, and outcome-oriented. By becoming an Employer of National Service, tribal governments have new access to this dedicated, highly qualified, and mission-oriented pool of potential employees. More than 300 companies, nonprofits, and state and local governments have already signed on to this initiative. CNCS is encouraging tribal governments to sign up and announce their participation on April 5.
- Host an Event: Invite AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers and their organization's staff and board to a recognition ceremony during your tribal council meeting. Ask a member to tell their impact story, or to bring along a beneficiary of their service. At the end, read your proclamation and take a photo.
- Visit a Program: See a national service project in action by visiting a school, homeless shelter, community center, or other service location. Hear from the members and beneficiaries about how national service is working.
- Host a Thank-You Event: Show your appreciation for the commitment of national service members by inviting them to a thank-you event. Team up with another organization to offer some kind of an award, such as a bus pass or gift card. Present awards for outstanding service members.
- Service Project: Organize a service project to bring together national service members and local community volunteers or serve with a national service program as an "AmeriCorps member or Senior Corps volunteer for a day" to highlight the important work being done in their community.

Recognition

- Take A Photo: Take a group photo with national service members in your community. We encourage you to hold a sign that reads “National Service Works in [Tribe].” A downloadable sign is available at our resources page. Tweet the photo using the #Tribe4Service, post it on your website and Facebook page, and email it to us at photos@cns.gov. See our Photo Guidance for more details.
- Issue a Proclamation: Issue a proclamation naming April 5, 2016, as a National Service Recognition Day. Sample proclamations are available in this toolkit.
- Put Out A Report: Highlight the scope and impact of national service in your community by working with local programs to put together a short report.

Media

- Use Social Media: Use Twitter, Facebook, and other social media platforms to thank national service members serving in your community. Check out our Social Media Guide for suggestions, sample messages, and hashtags. Use the web banners and badges found on our Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service resources webpage.
- Pitch the Media: Talk about national service in your weekly press conference or other media venue. Issue a press release on the scope and impact of national service in your community. Write an op-ed about the unique contributions of national service in your community. Our toolkit has sample a media advisory, press release, and op-ed to get you started. Send your press release to pressoffice@cns.gov so we can highlight activities across the country in our national press outreach.
- Shoot a Video: Many tribal leaders have access to video services or local cable channels. Put together a short video that shows what national service is doing in your community, including interviews and B-roll with national service participants, soundbites from tribal leaders, and shots from your Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service activities. Post it on your YouTube channel, play it through local cable stations, and send us a link at pressoffice@cns.gov.

PLANNING A GREAT EVENT

Tribal Leader Recognition Day provides a unique opportunity for tribal leaders to recognize the AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers in your community. This recognition event looks different in every community, based on the needs of the community, size of the national service community, and goals of the elected officials. Here are some tips to get started:

Identify a time: Try to settle on a time on April 5, 2016 that allows for maximum participation, including local media. That usually means mid-morning to early afternoon for same day coverage, although early morning breakfast events can work as well.

Secure a venue: Find the right venue for your event. This could be the steps of tribal government headquarters, a local park, or at an AmeriCorps or Senior Corps service location. Regardless of where you hold your event, ensure that your chosen site has the space to accommodate your expected audience. If you're expecting a small crowd, use a small space. It makes the photos look better.

Build a crowd: This is an amazing opportunity to engage a large number of local national service members and alumni. As you make your list, think big and include the entire national service family. That includes Senior Corps (Foster Grandparents, Senior Companions, and RSVP) and AmeriCorps (including AmeriCorps State and National grantees, AmeriCorps VISTA, and AmeriCorps NCCC, if a team is deployed in your area). Contact the CNCS Director in your state for information about all of the national service programs in your community. A list of CNCS state offices can be found here.

Create a great program: The program provides an opportunity to thank your local national service members, let them share their stories of service, and highlight the important work they are doing in your community. Be sure to include one or more AmeriCorps members or Senior Corps volunteers to tell their compelling stories of service. Their perspective is key to remind the audience what this ceremony is about and how important the service is.

Build your event: When building your event, make sure to think of the visuals that will be present, including tribal government logo, Tribal Leader Recognition Day signage, and AmeriCorps and Senior Corps logos. You can download and print your own materials using our resource page.

Your big announcement: Given all the attention focused on your event, this will be a great opportunity to make a big announcement. Begin thinking now about what you want to amplify. Here are a few ideas:

- Do you have a new grant that has not yet been announced? This is the perfect time to announce it.
- Is your tribe becoming an Employer of National Service? This is a great opportunity to share the news.

- Impact data: This will be a great time to amplify some of the accomplishments of AmeriCorps and Senior Corps in your community.

Tell us what's happening: It's important for CNCS headquarters to know what is happening around the country. That will help us deploy speakers and other resources, work with national media, and amplify what is taking place on this amazing day when we honor national service members.

- Feel free to tell us about your Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service event by emailing TribesForService@cns.gov.
- Share stories of service with us at engagement@cns.gov. Share photos now and after the event.

KEY MESSAGES

- GETTING THINGS DONE: Every day in communities across America, AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers address the most pressing challenges facing our country - from educating students for the jobs of the 21st century and supporting veterans and military families to preserving the environment and helping communities recover from natural disasters.
- SERVICE AS A SOLUTION: Given the many social needs facing our communities – and the fiscal constraints facing government at all levels – tribal governments are increasingly turning to national service as a cost-effective solution to meet local needs.
- THANKING THOSE WHO SERVE: The Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service is a nationwide bipartisan effort to recognize the positive impact of national service in our country, to thank those who serve, and to encourage citizens to give back to their communities.
- GET INVOLVED: National service shows the best of the American spirit – people turning toward problems instead of away, working together to find community solutions. Today, as we thank national service members for their commitment, let us all pledge to do our part to strengthen our country through service and volunteering.

TALKING POINTS

Background: How National Service Gets Things Done

- Service to others is a hallmark of the American character, and central to how we meet our challenges.
- Given the many social needs facing our communities – and the fiscal constraints facing government at all levels – tribal leaders are increasingly turning to national service and volunteerism to help meet local needs. Tribal leaders know that engaging citizens and nonprofit partners is a smart strategy to address national challenges.
- A key partner in our efforts is the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS). CNCS is the federal agency that oversees AmeriCorps, Senior Corps, and other programs that engage millions of citizens in service each year.
- This agency works hand-in-hand with tribal governments, nonprofits, and other local partners to support high-impact national service at more than 50,000 sites across the country.
- AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers address the most pressing challenges facing our nation. Whether supporting food banks and homeless shelters, restoring parks, providing health services, strengthening public safety and juvenile justice services, tutoring and mentoring students, and managing community volunteers, national service members help tribal leaders tackle tough problems.
- National service participants increase the impact of the organizations they serve with, both through their direct service and by recruiting and managing millions of additional volunteers.

Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service

- That's why I am pleased to join leaders around the country in the Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service. Tribal leaders are taking time to recognize the impact of national service in their communities and thank those who serve.
- Across the country, tribal leaders are participating in a variety of activities, including visiting national service programs, hosting roundtable discussions, issuing proclamations, and communicating about national service through social media.

- I am proud to join in this nationwide salute that will highlight the importance of citizen engagement, recognize the dedication of national service members, and inspire more residents to get involved in their communities.

Localize Impact of National Service in Our Community:

- More than [NUMBER OF PARTICIPANTS] AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers serve in our community, providing vital support to residents and improving the quality of life in our country.
- You don't hear their stories on the nightly news, but every day they head out, quietly and without fanfare, to improve lives and strengthen communities.
- [GIVE EXAMPLES OF NATIONAL SERVICE ACTIVITIES AND IMPACT]
- As a tribal [title], I am grateful for the dedication and sacrifice of these citizens, who are helping make our great community stronger, safer, and healthier. I have seen their impact first-hand, and know that national service is a cost-effective strategy to meet critical needs.

Get Involved!

- National service shows the best of the American spirit – people turning toward problems instead of away, working together to find community solutions.
- Strengthening that spirit is one of my goals as a tribal leader. Today, as we thank national service members for their commitment, let us all pledge to do our part to strengthen our community through service and volunteering.

What is the Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service?

The Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service is a nationwide bipartisan effort to recognize the positive impact of national service, to thank those who serve, and to encourage citizens to give back to their communities.

Why a Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service?

Tribal governments have a broad range of responsibilities to their residents, which matches CNCS's mission to improve lives, strengthen communities, and foster civic engagement. A coordinated day of recognition presents a unique opportunity to spotlight the key role that national service plays in helping tribes solve problems. Participating in the day will highlight the impact of citizen service, show support for nonprofit and national service groups, and inspire more residents to serve in their communities.

What is CNCS and how does national service help the nation?

As the federal agency for service and volunteering, the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS) engages millions of citizens in service at more than 50,000 locations across the country through AmeriCorps (including VISTA and NCCC), Senior Corps (including Foster Grandparents, Senior Companions, and RSVP), and other programs. CNCS also supports innovative community-based solutions improving the lives of low-income people through the Social Innovation Fund.

CNCS leverages federal and private funds to support organizations that achieve measurable results where the need is greatest. National service helps tribal leaders tackle problems in the following areas:

- tutoring and mentoring students
- supporting food banks and homeless shelters
- strengthening public safety and juvenile justice services
- restoring parks and public lands
- removing blight and creating safer neighborhoods
- supporting veterans and military families
- responding to disasters and emergencies
- providing health services
- managing community volunteers

What happened last year?

On April 7, 2015, the third-annual Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service united local leaders across the country to spotlight the impact of national service and honor those who serve. Altogether, 2,786 mayors, county officials, and tribal leaders in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, Guam, and Puerto Rico officially recognized the work that AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers are doing to make communities better and stronger. Together, these elected officials represent more than 150 million citizens, or half of the population. You can learn more about what happened last year in our 2015 Recognition Day wrap up on Storify.

Where did the idea come from?

Michael A. Nutter, former mayor of Philadelphia and president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, was a strong supporter of national service, having seen first-hand the key role service in tackling local problems in his hometown. In 2012, he came up with the idea of setting aside a day when mayors across the country could recognize and thank those who make a difference through national service. He shared the idea with Wendy Spencer, CEO of the Corporation for National and Community Service. Together, they began planning the first Mayors Day of Recognition for National Service, which took place on April 7, 2013, and engaged 832 Mayors across the country. In 2015 the initiative expanded to engage county officials through a partnership with the National Association of Counties. This year, tribal leaders from around the country will join the effort in the first annual Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service.

Who is participating?

Tribal government leaders from federally recognized or state recognized tribes, and Alaska native communities.

Is it a day of service?

There are multiple service days throughout the year, including the Martin Luther King Jr. Day of Service and the September 11 National Day of Service and Remembrance. While some tribal leaders are participating in service activities on April 5, most are using Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service as an opportunity to recognize the impact of national service and thank those who serve.

What are the goals of the day?

- Highlight how tribal leaders use national service to solve their local challenges
- Thank national service members for their commitment and impact
- Build public awareness about the value and impact of national service
- Highlight the role that national service plays in managing volunteers to focus and amplify their impact
- Provide opportunities for tribal leaders to communicate about the impact of national service to national policymakers
- Generate press coverage and online discussion about tribal leaders supporting service

Where can I learn more about national service and volunteering in my community?

CNCS offers a variety of resources that can help officials learn about national service and volunteering in their communities and expand the impact of volunteering by their residents:

- Each year, CNCS produces State Profiles that list all national service funding, projects, and participants in every state.

- CNCS also produces the annual Volunteering and Civic Life in America report, the most comprehensive data on volunteering ever assembled. Visit: www.volunteeringinamerica.gov

Who can I contact for more information?

- For information on Tribal Leader Recognition Day for National Service or CNCS programs, contact CNCS State Director in your state. A list is available at www.nationalservice.gov/about/contact/stateoffices.asp.
- For government relations questions, contact Tess Mason-Elder, Office of Government Relations, 202-606-6873 or TMason-Elder@cns.gov.
- For communications questions, contact the Office of External Affairs at pressoffice@cns.gov.

Who are the sponsors of Tribal Leader Day?

- The Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS) engages more than five million Americans in service through AmeriCorps, Senior Corps, and other programs, and leads President's national call to service initiative, United We Serve. For more information, visit NationalService.gov.

SOCIAL MEDIA GUIDE

Social media is a powerful tool for tribal leaders to highlight the impact of national service, thank those who serve, and draw more people into service. We strongly encourage tribal leaders to use social media to build buzz and engagement in the days leading up to and on April 5. Included below are a few ideas and suggestions to get you started. Please direct any questions to DigitalMedia@cns.gov - we're happy to connect with you!
