	Ayesha was in for a surprise when she received her financial aid offer. Because her income was low as a VISTA, she received enough aid that she didn't need her Education Award for her first year of college.
	But Ayesha had a problem; her computer was old.
	A myth surrounding the Education Award is that it can only be used for tuition or student loans. School policies differ, but in many cases, you can use it to buy a computer once tuition is paid.

They had her fill out a form, and a few days later, she had a check to buy a computer. She will now be able to write her papers at home instead of waiting in line at the computer lab. She wonders what other things she can buy with her Ed Award.

	After tuition and books are covered, students in the financial aid system can also use the award for living expenses like rent, food, and transportation, as long as the expenses fall under the “cost of attendance.”
	The award was designed to help you succeed in school. The key is to ask the financial aid office for help.
	Ayesha had a great VISTA experience, creating programs for children of prisoners in Seattle. With her new computer, she made good grades her first year, and had $3,000 of her Education Award for future uses.
