Washington, DC	AIDS United	AIDS United's Access to Care Initiative (A2C) aims to increase the number of HIV positive individuals receiving care. The SIF grant to AIDS United supports 12 innovative partnerships – collaborations of nonprofits, researchers and others – that are improving individual health outcomes and strengthening local services systems. In total, it will connect at least 6,146 low-income and marginalized individuals with HIV to high quality health care and the supportive services they need. In conjunction with this SIF grant program, AIDS United has partnered with researchers at Johns Hopkins' Bloomberg School of Public Health to conduct rigorous evaluations of its initiatives. Findings are expected to inform federal policy, including existing federal funding for HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment, and the implementation of the White House Office of National AIDS Policy's recent National HIV/AIDS Strategy. Lessons from the evaluations will also inform efforts to increase access to care among individuals with other chronic diseases.

Washington, DC	Local Initiatives Support Corporation (2010)	The Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC) is expanding by six cities and by 75% (from approximately 4,000 to 7,500) the number of individuals and families served by an innovative workforce development and asset building model called Financial Opportunity Centers (FOCs). The FOC model focuses on improving the financial bottom line for low-to-moderate income families by helping people boost earnings, reduce expenses, and make appropriate financial decisions. A rigorous evaluation design to be conducted at Chicago FOC sites, and additional analysis of other expansion sites, will provide greater evidence about the model's impact on employment, earnings and savings. The studies, to be conducted by the Economic Mobility Corporation, have been designed to inform workforce policy more broadly.

By working with the most effective partners, we are able to put our resources behind efforts that work to reach more children. In September 2014, Share Our Strength was awarded a five-year Social Innovation Fund grant, further validating the No Kid Hungry strategy, its scalability, and its potential to create transformational change. With this grant, six of the highest potential performing organizations were awarded grants totaling $1.85 million in the first year. This significant investment in scaling our program is moving us further, faster across the nation. Through the work of these new No Kid Hungry Communities, we are setting out to reach nearly 2 million children from low-income families. Surrounding kids with healthy meals is achievable in every corner of this country – from urban Seattle, to suburban parts of Michigan, to deep in the Heart of Texas.

Subgrantees are located in urban areas and participate in sophisticated data collection documenting effects on participants' body mass index (BMI) and physical fitness. The USSFF will administer SIF grant awards and provide oversight and technical assistance to its subgrantees, which will implement and conduct Soccer for Success (SfS) programs, the USSFF's signature anti-obesity effort, for five years. SfS uses a group mentoring model in a sports-based environment to encourage physical activity with an infusion of nutrition, health education, and healthy lifestyles. SfS's goal of improving participants' health will be followed using quantitative indicators for the following measurable outcomes: reduction in body mass index (BMI), increase in nutrition knowledge, and increase in fitness levels. Rigorous data collection and evaluation will support preliminary evidence and demonstrate that Soccer for Success (SfS) is an economical, scalable, and evidence-based program to arrest, prevent, and reduce obesity, a national health crisis of staggering proportions.

Washington, DC	Washington AIDS Partnership AIDS United	Positive Pathways is a program in the District of Columbia that assists HIV-positive African Americans living in Wards 5-8 to participate with HIV medical care and supportive safety net services, with a particular focus on HIV-positive women and their partners. Led by Washington AIDS Partnership, Positive Pathways is a collaboration between eight community partners and the DC Department of Health. Through a network of 12 trained peer Community Health Workers (CHWs) placed in community and primary care settings, Positive Pathways works to support program participants to take full advantage of HIV medical care and other community services to improve their health and quality of life. CHWs work at their employing organizations and in the community to identify individuals who are HIV-positive and not receiving HIV medical care in order to build trust and inform them about living with HIV, to provide personalized assistance to help them enter medical care, and to support them throughout the early part of their care until they are fully involved. Peers utilize their unique position to address barriers to care that can present challenges for other medical professionals. These CHWs provide trust-based information and education; help clients overcome fear, denial and stigma; conduct outreach and support deep in the community; take the time to walk clients through the often overwhelming healthcare system; and help clients strategize to manage the logistics of caring for oneself in the context of a complicated life.

Washington, DC	DC Water Harvard Kennedy School Social Impact Bond Lab	The SIB Lab will work with the District of Columbia Water and Sewer Authority (DC Water) to explore the use of Pay for Success (PFS) models to develop “green” infrastructure storm water solutions designed to improve water quality, mitigate the impacts of climate change, and promote environmental, socio-economic and health benefits. DC Water is pursuing the PFS model as a potential framework for financing a pilot Green Infrastructure Project (GI Project) that is designed to reduce the scope, scale and cost of the mandated grey infrastructure tunnel system, alleviate ratepayer burden, and produce measurable outcomes for communities within the District. Specifically, the SIB Lab will be using available data and evidence to conduct a feasibility analysis of the proposed GI Project using the PFS model. The feasibility analysis would focus on five main aspects of the PFS transaction: (1) assessing whether the proposed interventions produce the desired outcomes; (2) confirming that the likely outcomes satisfy cost-benefit principles; (3) developing an efficient and effective payment structure within a PFS model; (4) insuring that there are adequate service providers that can deliver the desired outcomes; and (5) establishing rigorous evaluation criteria and metrics to measure the initiative’s outcomes.
